

Money matters.

If you're working to raise students' awareness of their consumer rights – or of financial matters in general – visit our website to find out about the Financial Ombudsman Service.

Set up by law, we offer a free, independent service, helping consumers settle financial complaints they've not been able to sort out with their bank, insurance company or finance firm.

The wide range of resources we offer includes an education pack, providing key information for younger people about our role.
