

The complaint

Mr S has a self-invested personal pension (“SIPP”) with Options UK Personal Pensions LLP (“Options”), formerly Carey Pensions UK LLP (“Carey”). Mr S transferred his existing personal pensions to the SIPP to invest in a property-based investment scheme in Cape Verde. Mr S’s complaint is that Options was negligent in accepting his application to make such an investment from the unregulated introducer in his case.

What happened

I will first set out my understanding of the various parties involved, their roles, and an overview of the investment in this complaint.

Options (formerly Carey)

Options is a SIPP provider and administrator, regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority (“FCA”). Options is authorised, in relation to SIPPs, to arrange (bring about) deals in investments, deal in investments as principal, establish, operate or wind up a pension scheme and make arrangements with a view to transactions in investments. Carey was not, and Options is not, authorised to advise on investments.

Whilst Mr S’s dealings were with Carey, I’ll refer to Options throughout this decision for simplicity.

Mr S

Mr S is the complainant in this case, and he is represented by a claims management company. Mr S applied for a SIPP with Options in February 2012.

Cape Verde4 Life

Cape Verde4 Life (“CV4L”) was a UK based company. It was involved in overseas property-based investments. It was not regulated by the FCA, or its predecessor, the Financial Services Authority (“FSA”). It was therefore not authorised to advise on investments covered by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (“FSMA”) in the UK. One of the directors was a man I will call Mr C. CV4L was an introducer of business to Options. It introduced Mr S’s application to open a SIPP to Options. CV4L was at the time of Mr S’s investment described as an authorised representative of Oasis Atlántico.

Oasis Atlántico

Oasis Atlántico Imobiliária SARL (“Oasis”) is a company incorporated under the laws of Cape Verde. It owned land in Cape Verde on which it was to build a tourism resort named Salinas Sea. The development was split into units (in effect hotel rooms).

As I understand it, there was more than one way to invest in the Salinas Sea project.

I have seen a brochure promoting investment via two Special Purpose Vehicles (companies) which were intended to be set up on a basis that could be invested in within a UK SIPP. This form of investment involved buying shares in the companies which in turn invested in units in Salinas Sea.

This form of investment required a minimum investment of £10,000. The brochure said it was intended for authorised financial advisers and gave the impression it was an investment for high-net-worth clients and/or sophisticated investors.

Alternatively, it was possible for an investor to buy a unit or part of a unit. Mr S invested in this way and opted to purchase a 25% share of a unit.

Buying a unit also involved entering into a Hotel Agreement under which the buyer/investor appointed the seller (Oasis) to operate the overall development (including the unit) as a hotel. When the unit was completed, Oasis was to let the buyer know it was available for inspection and then the contract was to be completed. The unit was to be part of the hotel and managed as a whole by the manager, rather than the individual investor.

During the first three years, the investor was to be paid an annual income of at least 5% of the price paid. There was also provision for payment of income at the same level if the hotel was not completed and opened on time.

There was a formula for calculating the rental income payable to the investor which involved pooling the rental income of all units rather than based on the occupancy of the investor’s individual unit. Investors would receive income on this basis during the first three years if greater than 5% and calculated on this basis after the first three years. An investor could sell their unit on the open market subject to the Hotel Agreement.

Mr S’s investment in Salinas Sea

Mr S invested in a 25% holding of a unit with a purchase price of £25,000. Mr S funded the investment using £12,500 from his SIPP as an initial deposit, followed by a second payment of £3,750, and the remaining balance due once the unit and sale was completed. There was an option to fund the completion balance with a mortgage from Oasis.

Mr S’s investment was made in May 2012. Prior to making the investment, Mr S signed a document headed “Salinas Sea – Alternative Investment Member Declaration & Indemnity”.

The resort was completed in 2013 and I understand Oasis wrote letters to Options in late 2013 to confirm units were ready to be inspected before completion. From the evidence I’ve seen, it appears Mr S took up the financing option from Oasis to complete the purchase.

The relationship between CV4L and Options

As I understand it, Options’ relationship with CV4L began in April 2011. CV4L was an introducer of business to Options and Options has said it received around 90 introductions between April 2011 and November 2013, when it ended its relationship with CV4L after it decided to stop accepting business from unregulated introducers generally.

Options says it acted properly in accepting introductions from CV4L. It was not prohibited from accepting introductions from unregulated introducers. It says it undertook due diligence checks on CV4L on a number of occasions and had no reason to believe it should not accept introductions from it at the time of Mr S's introduction.

Due diligence carried out by Options on CV4L

Options has provided the Financial Ombudsman Service with information about the due diligence it carried out on CV4L.

Options says:

- CV4L first proposed to become an introducer of SIPP business for Options in April 2011. It was an introducer from late April 2011 until November 2013 when Options made a business decision to no longer accept introductions from unregulated introducers.
- CV4L was working with an FCA regulated adviser, 1Stop Financial Services, who were at the time authorised to advise on pension transfers, "if investors wished to take advice".
- Options did not pay any commission to CV4L for introducing business to it. It did not see the details of any payments made to CV4L by the underlying provider, but CV4L did disclose on its "Introducer Profile" that it would receive approximately 8%.
- Options did not request copies of any suitability reports.
- Options did not consider the Salinas Sea investment to be a non-mainstream pooled investment. It says it was an investment "into bricks and mortar property where they could be rented out with the rental returned to the pension scheme bank account."

In addition to the above, I note CV4L completed a "non-regulated introducer profile" with Options. It was sent to CV4L in March 2012 when Options said:

"As you, [CV4L], introduce business to [Options] then for compliance records and for the sake of good order we need to put in place Non Regulated Introducer Information and Terms of Business between our companies.

I attach an Introducer Profile and terms of Business and would be grateful if you could agree and complete these and return to me.

I have used a commencement date of 28 April 2011 for the Terms which is the date of your first case with us..."

The profile document was signed by CV4L in September 2012. The form recorded a number of points in relation to CV4L including:

- It had been operating for five years, its principal address was in the UK, and it had a branch in Cape Verde.
- It promoted Salinas Sea and intended to distribute future resorts from Oasis.

- The Salinas Sea investment was accepted by a number of other named SIPP operators.
- CV4L and/or its agents obtain clients from a “UK distribution network” (without further elaboration).
- The sales process adopted by CV4L and/or its agents was noted as “Mainly pension review/non reg” (without further elaboration).
- The average client was described as aged 45 plus, employed and self-employed with an income of £20-50K.
- Typical commission structure was noted as “master agent commission circa 8%”.
- Its objective for the coming 12 months was noted as “sell out Salinas Sea/launch new Oasis resorts”.
- Training was provided by an IFA and a compliance partner on SIPPs, and FSA and HMRC rules.
- The business produced by agents was monitored by Mr C reviewing all completed sales before submitting the application to the SIPP provider.
- CV4L worked with “1SFS IFA” and “TFPP IFA”. I understand those firms to be 1Stop Financial Services and The Financial Planning Partnership.
- CV4L used a third-party compliance business to ensure no regulated activities were carried out by it.
- It had not been subject to any regulatory action or complaints.

Options entered into a terms of Business agreement with CV4L in September 2012. It backdated that agreement to April 2011. In April 2013, Options conducted a “World Check” search on Mr C of CV4L. The check did not reveal anything adverse.

Due diligence carried out by Options on Salinas Sea

As I understand it, Options carried out checks on the Salinas Sea investment in 2010. It concluded it was eligible for investment in a pension scheme. It also decided as a result of that review that all investors in its SIPPs should complete its Alternative Member Declaration and Indemnity. I’ll refer to this document throughout this decision as “the declaration”.

I have seen a review of the Special Purpose Vehicle version of the investment carried out by a third party in April 2012 (prior to Mr S’s investment), which was provided to Options. It includes a suggestion that SIPP operators obtain an acknowledgement from scheme members of the high risk, illiquid nature of the investment. And “where scheme members are not transacting this through an FSA authorized adviser, the SIPP operator may wish to obtain a copy of the [high-net-worth]/sophisticated investor certificate.”

I will refer to the declaration mentioned above again later in this decision. It is enough to say here that because of its checks upon the Salinas Sea investment, Options referred to the investment as an unregulated alternative investment considered high risk and speculative.

Mr S's dealings with Options and CV4L

Mr S completed an application form for an Options SIPP dated 6 February 2012. The form indicated Mr S intended to transfer his existing personal pensions into the SIPP, which had a combined estimated transfer value of around £28,000. The form also indicated Mr S intended to invest 100% of his pension fund in Salinas Sea.

The application form included a page for the details of the applicant's financial adviser. This page was not completed.

Options says that as CV4L was not a regulated adviser and acted only as an introducer, Mr S was classified as a direct client of Options.

Mr S told us he received an unsolicited telephone call asking if he wanted to make an appointment with an independent financial adviser to obtain a free pension review. He said he was then contacted by CV4L (who he now understands was not authorised by the FCA), and was advised to open an Options SIPP, move his existing pensions to it, and invest in Salinas Sea. Mr S told us CV4L assisted him with completing the SIPP application form and arranged for his existing pensions to be transferred to Options. Mr S told us he now understands he should never have been advised to transfer his existing pensions to purchase a share of a hotel room. He has no other investments and believes the investment to be worthless as there is no market for it. He said he has lost his life savings.

Neither Mr S nor Options have provided copies of documents recording the recommendation Mr S says he was given by CV4L.

Mr S was required to sign Options' member declaration prior to the investment being made. The declaration recorded the investment type as "Hotel Room – Aparthotel on Sal (Cape Verde Islands)".

The declaration began:

"I, [Mr S] being a member of the above scheme write to instruct [Options Trustees] to purchase a Hotel Room, with borrowing from the developer, with Salinas Sea on the island of Sal in the Cape Verde Islands, managed on "hotel room basis", through Oasis Atlántico, for a consideration of £... on my behalf for the above Scheme."

The amount Mr S had agreed to invest had been left blank on the declaration.

The declaration then included a number of points including:

- Mr S understood that the investment was high risk and/or speculative and he had taken appropriate advice, including financial, tax, and investment advice.
- Mr S understood Options and Options Trustees were acting on an execution only basis and hadn't advised him.

The declaration also included an agreement by Mr S to indemnify Options against any claims etc in connection with the investment.

Mr S was not asked to state or otherwise indicate or provide evidence to show that he was a high-net-worth individual, or sophisticated investor in the declaration, or in his SIPP application, or otherwise.

In or around April 2012, a solicitor that I understand Options had instructed issued a report setting out the terms of agreement for the Salinas Sea investment. This report indicated Mr S had agreed to pay £25,000 for a 25% share of a hotel unit. The investment would be funded by an initial deposit of £12,500 paid when the contract was signed, a further payment of £3,750 on 31 May 2012, and the remaining balance paid when the deed of purchase and sale was completed.

On 2 May 2012, the initial deposit of £12,500 for the Salinas Sea investment left Mr S's SIPP, and a further payment of £3,750 was made on 30 May 2012.

I understand Options Trustees, on behalf of Mr S's SIPP entered into a Hotel Agreement, which related to the management of the hotel room as part of the overall development. Income from the unit was to be pooled with other units. Income was guaranteed at a certain level for the first three years. The unit could be sold on the open market subject to the Hotel Agreement which had a 25-year term.

I understand that in late 2013, Oasis announced the resort had been completed and invitations for investors to inspect their units were issued.

The evidence I've seen indicates Mr S took up the financing option from Oasis to complete the purchase.

Mr S's complaint to Options

In May 2021, Mr S, with the help of a claims management company complained to Options. Mr S said CV4L – an unregulated introducer – recommended he transfer out of his existing personal pensions, open an Options SIPP and invest in Salinas Sea. He said:

- He has been told the investment is now worthless and he has suffered considerable financial loss.
- CV4L was unregulated, which would've been clear to Options had sufficient due diligence been carried out.
- It appeared Options had entered into a joint enterprise agreement with CV4L, which meant Options was liable for CV4L's unsuitable advice.
- Options established SIPPs for retail clients which it knew, or ought to have known, hadn't received advice on the suitability of the SIPP or investments from an authorised financial adviser.
- The responsibilities of SIPP providers had been considered in a number of FCA publications, which it appears Options ignored.
- CV4L was clearly carrying out regulated activities without authorisation.
- Options was responsible for his losses and he believed s 27 FSMA applied on the basis that Options ought to have understood CV4L carried out regulated activities when it was unauthorised to do so. Mr S didn't believe a court would allow the agreement to be enforced pursuant to s 28 FSMA.

Options did not uphold Mr S's complaint. It made a number of points including:

- Mr S's SIPP was set up on an execution only basis. Options didn't provide any advice to Mr S and wasn't permitted to do so.

- It had no reason to believe it shouldn't accept introductions from CV4L.
- Options understood CV4L to have acted as introducer only. Mr S's SIPP application contained no financial adviser details. Mr S did not make Options aware that he had received advice from CV4L and believed Mr S had contributed to his own potential losses by not being open and honest with Options.
- Mr S signed a member declaration, which highlighted the risks associated with the investment. Mr S signed to confirm he'd read and understood the declarations and risk warnings. He shouldn't have signed the document if he didn't understand the warnings.
- It was not responsible for Mr S's investment decision, or that the investment hadn't performed in line with his expectations.

Unhappy with Options' response, Mr S referred his complaint to the Financial Ombudsman Service.

One of our Investigators considered the complaint. They thought the complaint should be upheld. They made a number of points including:

- The Principles for Businesses ("the Principles"), and in particular Principles 2, 3 and 6 were relevant to their findings.
- The regulator had issued a number of publications which discussed the Principles and gave examples of good industry practice in relation to SIPP operators.
- Options was not responsible for giving Mr S advice. But it could not absolve itself from any responsibility for identifying potential instances of consumer detriment.
- It's clear Options understood it had a duty to carry out due diligence on CV4L. And whilst Options did take some steps – it ought to have done more at the outset of its relationship with CV4L. And had it done so, it would have concluded it should not have accepted Mr S's application.
- The type of investment Mr S entered into wasn't suitable for retail investors.
- Options ought to have made enquiries about the involvement of regulated financial advisers CV4L had said it was working with. Further enquiries would have indicated CV4L was carrying on regulated activities without authorisation.
- In all the circumstances it was not fair and reasonable for Options to accept Mr S's application.
- S.27 FMSA provided a further basis to uphold the complaint. The Investigator didn't believe a court would determine it to be just and equitable in the circumstances that the agreement should be enforced (pursuant to s.28 FSMA).

The Investigator thought it was unnecessary to go on to consider the due diligence (if any) carried out by Options on the Salinas Sea investment.

Finally, our Investigator set out how Options should put things right by putting Mr S as far as possible, into the position he would now be in but for it accepting the business from CV4L. They considered that if Options had acted appropriately, it's more likely than not that Mr S would've kept his previous pension schemes. They set out how Options should calculate his losses and compensate him.

Our Investigator also recommended Options pay Mr S £500 for the distress caused by the knowledge that he has potentially suffered a significant loss of pension funds.

Mr S's representative confirmed that Mr S accepted our Investigator's view. Options didn't provide any further evidence or comments.

As no agreement was reached as to how this complaint should be resolved, it has been passed to me to decide.

My provisional decision

In advance of this decision, I issued my provisional findings to the parties, in which I explained why I'd concluded Mr S's complaint should be upheld – although for different reasons to those reached by the Investigator.

At the same time, I set out my finding that Mr S's complaint is not time barred and can be considered by the Financial Ombudsman Service. My decision that Mr S's complaint has been referred in time remains unchanged, and so I shan't repeat my reasoning here.

I invited both parties to respond with any comments they wished to make in light of my provisional findings, including any evidence to confirm if any of the pensions Mr S transferred to his Options SIPP contained any guaranteed benefits that were lost upon transfer, or if Mr S has suffered a missed opportunity to take retirement benefits as a result of the current status of his SIPP investment. Mr S's representative confirmed Mr S accepted my provisional findings and had no further comments aside from noting that he would like the redress paid to him directly as a lump sum rather than into his pension. Options didn't respond to my provisional decision.

As the parties made no further submissions in relation to this complaint, I don't consider that I need to depart from the findings that I provisionally reached on Mr S's complaint in any way. So, I have repeated my provisional findings below, with a few minor amendments, as my final decision, and have not therefore included any further detail of them in this background summary.

I've decided that Mr S's complaint should be upheld. I'll explain why.

What I've decided – and why

I've considered all the available evidence and arguments to decide what's fair and reasonable in the circumstances of this complaint.

Where the evidence is incomplete, inconclusive, or contradictory, I've reached my conclusions on the balance of probabilities – that is, what I think is more likely than not to have happened based on the available evidence, what I've seen on similar cases and the wider surrounding circumstances. In reaching my decision I've carefully reviewed all points raised by Mr S and Options, but will limit my reasoning to what I consider to be the key issues.

Relevant considerations

I'm required to determine this complaint by reference to what I consider to be fair and reasonable in all the circumstances of the case. When considering what is fair and reasonable, I am required to take into account: relevant law and regulations; regulators' rules, guidance and standards; codes of practice; and, where appropriate, what I consider to have been good industry practice at the relevant time.

The Principles

The Principles, which are set out within the FCA's handbook, "are a general statement of the fundamental obligations of firms under the regulatory system" (PRIN 1.1.2G). I consider that the Principles relevant to this complaint include Principles 2, 3 and 6 which say:

"Principle 2 – Skill, care and diligence – A firm must conduct its business with due skill, care and diligence.

Principle 3 – Management and control – A firm must take reasonable care to organise and control its affairs responsibly and effectively, with adequate risk management systems.

Principle 6 – Customers' interests – A firm must pay due regard to the interests of its customers and treat them fairly."

I have considered the relevant law and what this says about the application of the FCA's Principles. In R (British Bankers Association) v Financial Services Authority [2011] EWHC 999 (Admin) ("BBA") Ouseley J said at paragraph 162:

"The Principles are best understood as the ever present substrata to which the specific rules are added. The Principles always have to be complied with. The Specific rules do not supplant them and cannot be used to contradict them. They are but specific applications of them to the particular requirement they cover. The general notion that the specific rules can exhaust the application of the Principles is inappropriate. It cannot be an error of law for the Principles to augment specific rules."

And at paragraph 77 of BBA, Ouseley J said:

"Indeed, it is my view that it would be a breach of statutory duty for the Ombudsman to reach a view on a case without taking the Principles into account in deciding what would be fair and reasonable and what redress to afford. Even if no Principles had been produced by the FSA, the FOS would find it hard to fulfil its particular statutory duty without having regard to the sort of high level Principles which find expression in the Principles, whoever formulated them. They are of the essence of what is fair and reasonable, subject to the argument about their relationship to specific rules."

In R (Berkeley Burke SIPP Administration Ltd) v Financial Ombudsman Service [2018] EWHC 2878 ("BBSAL"), Berkeley Burke brought a judicial review claim challenging the decision of an Ombudsman who had upheld a consumer's complaint against it. The Ombudsman considered the FCA Principles and good industry practice at the relevant time. He concluded that it was fair and reasonable for Berkeley Burke to have undertaken due diligence in respect of the investment before allowing it into the SIPP wrapper, and that if it had done so, it would have refused to accept the investment.

The Ombudsman found Berkeley Burke had therefore not complied with its regulatory obligations and had not treated its client fairly. Jacobs J, having set out some paragraphs of BBA including paragraph 162 set out above, said (at paragraph 104 of BBSAL):

“These passages explain the overarching nature of the Principles. As the FCA correctly submitted in their written argument, the role of the Principles is not merely to cater for new or unforeseen circumstances. The judgment in BBA shows that they are, and indeed were always intended to be, of general application. The aim of the Principles based regulation described by Ouseley J. was precisely not to attempt to formulate a code covering all possible circumstances, but instead to impose general duties such as those set out in Principles 2 and 6.”

The BBSAL judgment also considered section 228 FSMA and the approach an ombudsman is to take when deciding a complaint. The judgment of Jacobs J in BBSAL upheld the lawfulness of the approach taken by the Ombudsman in that complaint, which I have described above, and included the Principles and good industry practice at the relevant time as relevant considerations that were required to be taken into account.

As outlined above, Ouseley J in the BBA case held that it would be a breach of statutory duty if I were to reach a view on a complaint without taking the Principles into account in deciding what is fair and reasonable in all the circumstances of a case. And, Jacobs J adopted a similar approach to the application of the Principles in BBSAL. So, the Principles are a relevant consideration here and I will consider them in the specific circumstances of this complaint.

The Adams court cases and COBS 2.1.1R

I confirm I have taken account of the judgment of the High Court in the case of Adams v Options SIPP [2020] EWHC 1229 (Ch) and the Court of Appeal judgment in Adams v Options UK Personal Pensions LLP [2021] EWCA Civ 474. I note the Supreme Court refused Options permission to appeal the Court of Appeal judgment.

I've considered whether these judgments mean that the Principles should not be taken into account in deciding this case. And I am of the view they do not. In the High Court case, HHJ Dight did not consider the application of the Principles and they did not form part of the pleadings submitted by Mr Adams. One of the main reasons why HHJ Dight found that the judgment of Jacobs J in BBSAL was not of direct relevance to the case before him was because “the specific regulatory provisions which the learned judge in Berkeley Burke was asked to consider are not those which have formed the basis of the claimant's case before me.”

Likewise, the Principles were not considered by the Court of Appeal. So, the Adams judgments say nothing about the application of the FCA's Principles to the Ombudsman's consideration of a complaint.

I acknowledge that COBS 2.1.1R (A firm must act honestly, fairly and professionally in accordance with the best interests of its client) overlaps with certain of the Principles, and that this rule was considered by HHJ Dight in the High Court case. Mr Adams pleaded that Options SIPP owed him a duty to comply with COBS 2.1.1R, a breach of which, he argued, was actionable pursuant to section 138(D) of FSMA (“the COBS claim”). HHJ Dight rejected this claim and found that Options SIPP had complied with the best interests rule on the facts of Mr Adams' case.

Although the Court of Appeal ultimately overturned HHJ Dight's Judgment, it rejected the part of Mr Adams' appeal that related to HHJ Dight's dismissal of the COBS claim on the basis that Mr Adams was trying to advance a case that was radically different to that found in his initial pleadings. The Court found that this part of Mr Adams' appeal did not so much represent a challenge to the grounds on which HHJ Dight had dismissed the COBS claim, but rather was an attempt to put forward an entirely new case.

I note that HHJ Dight found that the factual context of a case would inform the extent of the duty imposed by COBS 2.1.1R. HHJ Dight said at para 148:

“In my judgment in order to identify the extent of the duty imposed by Rule 2.1.1 one has to identify the relevant factual context, because it is apparent from the submissions of each of the parties that the context has an impact on the ascertainment of the extent of the duty. The key fact, perhaps composite fact, in the context is the agreement into which the parties entered, which defined their roles and functions in the transaction.”

The facts in Mr S’s case are different from those in Adams. There are also differences between the breaches of COBS 2.1.1R alleged by Mr Adams and the issues in Mr S’s complaint. The breaches were summarised in paragraph 120 of the Court of Appeal Judgment. In particular, HHJ Dight considered the contractual relationship between the parties in the context of Mr Adams’ pleaded breaches of COBS 2.1.1R that happened after the contract was entered into. In Mr S’s complaint, I am considering whether Options ought to have identified that the introductions from CV4L and/or the investments in Salinas Sea involved a risk of consumer detriment and, if so, whether it ought to have ceased accepting such introductions and/or making such investments prior to entering into a contract with Mr S.

As already mentioned, I must determine this complaint by reference to what is, in my opinion, fair and reasonable in all the circumstances of the case. And, in doing that, I am required to take into account relevant considerations which include: law and regulations; regulator’s rules, guidance and standards; codes of practice; and, where appropriate, what I consider to have been good industry practice at the relevant time. This is a clear and relevant point of difference between this complaint and the judgments in both Adams cases. That was a legal claim which was defined by the formal pleadings in Mr Adams’ statement of case.

I have proceeded on the understanding Options was not obliged – and not able – to give advice to Mr S on the suitability of its SIPP or the investments for him personally. But I am satisfied Options’ obligations included deciding whether to accept particular investments into its SIPP and/or whether to accept introductions of business from particular businesses.

Regulatory publications

The FCA (and its predecessor, the Financial Services Authority (“FSA”)), has issued a number of publications which remind SIPP operators of their obligations and set out how they might achieve the outcomes envisaged by the Principles, namely:

- The 2009 and 2012 thematic review reports.
- The October 2013 finalised SIPP operator guidance.
- The July 2014 “Dear CEO” letter.

The 2009 report included the following statement:

“We are very clear that SIPP operators, regardless of whether they provide advice, are bound by Principle 6 of the Principles for Businesses (‘a firm must pay due regard to the interests of its customers and treat them fairly’) insofar as they are obliged to ensure the fair treatment of their customers. COBS 3.2.3(2) states that a member of a pension scheme is a ‘client’ for COBS purposes, and ‘Customer’ in terms of Principle 6 includes clients.

It is the responsibility of SIPP operators to continuously analyse the individual risks to themselves and their clients, with reference to the six TCF consumer outcomes.

We agree that firms acting purely as SIPP operators are not responsible for the SIPP advice given by third parties such as IFAs. However, we are also clear that SIPP operators cannot absolve themselves of any responsibility, and we would expect them to have procedures and controls, and to be gathering and analysing management information, enabling them to identify possible instances of financial crime and consumer detriment such as unsuitable SIPPs. Such instances could then be addressed in an appropriate way, for example by contacting the member to confirm the position, or by contacting the firm giving advice and asking for clarification. Moreover, while they are not responsible for the advice, there is a reputational risk to SIPP operators that facilitate the SIPPs that are unsuitable or detrimental to clients.

Of particular concern were firms whose systems and controls were weak and inadequate to the extent that they had not identified obvious potential instances of poor advice and/or potential financial crime. Depending on the facts and circumstances of individual cases, we may take enforcement action against SIPP operators who do not safeguard their clients' interests in this respect, with reference to Principle 3 of the Principles for Business ('a firm must take reasonable care to organise and control its affairs responsibly and effectively, with adequate risk management systems').

The following are examples of measures that SIPP operators could consider, taken from examples of good practice that we observed and suggestions we have made to firms:

- Confirming, both initially and on an ongoing basis, that intermediaries that advise clients are authorised and regulated by the FSA, that they have the appropriate permissions to give the advice they are providing to the firm's clients, and that they do not appear on the FSA website listing warning notices.*
- Having Terms of Business agreements governing relationships, and clarifying respective responsibilities, with intermediaries introducing SIPP business.*
- Routinely recording and reviewing the type (i.e. the nature of the SIPP investment) and size of investments recommended by intermediaries that give advice and introduce clients to the firm, so that potentially unsuitable SIPPs can be identified.*
- Being able to identify anomalous investments, e.g. unusually small or large transactions or more 'esoteric' investments such as unquoted shares, together with the intermediary that introduced the business. This would enable the firm to seek appropriate clarification, e.g. from the client or their adviser, if it is concerned about the suitability of what was recommended.*
- Requesting copies of the suitability reports provided to clients by the intermediary giving advice. While SIPP operators are not responsible for advice, having this information would enhance the firm's understanding of its clients, making the facilitation of unsuitable SIPPs less likely.*
- Routinely identifying instances of execution-only clients who have signed disclaimers taking responsibility for their investment decisions, and gathering* and analysing data regarding the aggregate volume of such business.

- Identifying instances of clients waiving their cancellation rights, and the reasons for this.”

Although I've only referred to one of the above publications in detail, I have considered all of them in their entirety.

I acknowledge that the 2009 and 2012 reports and the “Dear CEO” letter are not formal “guidance” (whereas the 2013 finalised guidance is). However, the fact that the reports and “Dear CEO” letter did not constitute formal guidance does not mean their importance should be underestimated. They provide a reminder that the Principles apply and are an indication of the kinds of things a SIPP operator might do to ensure it is treating its customers fairly and produce the outcomes envisaged by the Principles. In that respect, the publications, which set out the regulator’s expectations of what SIPP operators should be doing, also goes some way to indicate what I consider amounts to good industry practice and I am, therefore, satisfied it is appropriate to take them into account.

It is relevant that when deciding what amounted to have been good industry practice in the BBSAL case, the Ombudsman found that “the regulator’s reports, guidance and letter go a long way to clarify what should be regarded as good practice and what should not.” And the judge in BBSAL endorsed the lawfulness of the approach taken by the Ombudsman.

Like the Ombudsman in the BBSAL case, I do not think the fact the publications, (other than the 2009 Thematic Review Report), post-date the events that took place in relation to Mr S’s complaint, mean that the examples of good practice they provide were not good practice at the time of the relevant events. Although the later publications were published after the events subject to this complaint, the Principles that underpin them existed throughout, as did the obligation to act in accordance with the Principles.

It is also clear from the text of the 2009 and 2012 reports (and the “Dear CEO” letter in 2014), that the regulator expected SIPP operators to have incorporated the recommended good practices into the conduct of their business already. So, whilst the regulator’s comments suggest some industry participants’ understanding of how the good practice standards shaped what was expected of SIPP operators changed over time, it is clear the standards themselves had not changed.

I note that HHJ Dight in the Adams case did not consider the 2012 thematic review, 2013 SIPP operator guidance and 2014 “Dear CEO” letter to be of relevance to his consideration of Mr Adams’ claim. But it does not follow that those publications are irrelevant to my consideration of what is fair and reasonable in the circumstances of this complaint. I am required to take into account good industry practice at the relevant time. And, as mentioned, the publications indicate what I consider amounts to good industry practice at the relevant time.

That doesn’t mean that, in considering what is fair and reasonable, I will only consider Options’ actions with these documents in mind. The reports, Dear CEO letter and guidance gave non-exhaustive examples of good industry practice. They did not say the suggestions given were the limit of what a SIPP operator should do. As the annex to the “Dear CEO” letter notes, what should be done to meet regulatory obligations will depend on the circumstances.

To be clear, I do not say the Principles or the publications obliged Options to ensure the pension was suitable for Mr S. It is accepted Options was not required to give advice to Mr S, and could not give advice. And I accept the publications do not alter the meaning of, or the scope of, the Principles. But they are evidence of what I consider to have been good industry practice at the relevant time, which would bring about the outcomes envisaged by the Principles.

What did Options' obligations mean in practice?

In this case, the business Options was conducting was its operation of SIPPs. I am satisfied that meeting its regulatory obligations when conducting this business would include deciding whether to accept or reject particular investments and/or referrals of business. The regulatory publications provided some examples of good industry practice observed by the FSA and FCA during their work with SIPP operators including being satisfied that a particular introducer is appropriate to deal with.

It is clear from Options' non-regulated introducer profile in this case, that by early 2012, if not before, it understood and accepted that as a non-advisory SIPP operator, its obligations meant it had a responsibility to carry out due diligence on CV4L and that it could, and should decide not to do business with an introducer if it thought that was appropriate.

I am satisfied that, in order to meet the appropriate standards of good industry practice and the obligations set by the regulator's rules and regulations, Options should have carried out due diligence on CV4L. And in my opinion, Options should have used the knowledge it gained from its due diligence to decide whether to accept or reject a referral of business.

The due diligence carried out by Options on the Salinas Sea investment

Because of what I say below about the introducer, I'm satisfied I do not need to refer to the due diligence carried out by Options on the Salinas Sea investment in detail.

Options has recently told us that the investment was not considered a non-mainstream pooled investment. It says it was a bricks and mortar property to be rented out with the rental income paid to the SIPP.

In my view this is an oversimplification. Mr S was not making a straightforward purchase of, say, a holiday apartment or villa that he could occupy or rent out as he saw fit and freely sell on the open property market. He was buying a 25% share in a hotel room in a development that was not yet complete, where the property would form part of a hotel. Mr S would, in principle, be free to sell the investment if he wanted to, but he must sell subject to the Hotel Agreement. So, the ability to sell, in practice, depends on there being a market for hotel rooms, or shares in hotel room investments.

These points were or were largely understood by Options at the time of Mr S's investment, when it categorised the investment as an unregulated alternative investment that was high risk and speculative, which might be difficult to sell/realise. And this understanding of the investment formed part of the context in which, or was a relevant factor in, the checks made by Options on CV4L since it planned to introduce clients for the purpose of investing in Salinas Sea.

The due diligence carried out by Options on the introducer

Options was permitted to accept business from unregulated introducers. It was not therefore at fault simply because it accepted business introduced from CV4L.

I note that Options' non-regulated introducer profile form, which it completed with CV4L began with the following words:

“As an FSA regulated pensions company, we are required to carry out due diligence as best practice on unregulated introducer firms looking to introduce clients to us, to gain some insight into the business they carry on.”

So, there is no dispute that Options took steps to make checks on CV4L and understand its business model. It seems to have sent the form to CV4L to complete in March 2012. The completed form was signed in September 2012. Both dates post-date Mr S's application to Options, so Options had decided to accept Mr S's introduction prior to carrying out its checks on CV4L.

Although Options asked CV4L to complete the non-regulated introducer profile in 2012, in my opinion, it should have completed a due diligence assessment on CV4L before it first agreed to accept any business from CV4L in 2011.

I also consider that good industry practice was to carry out further checks on introducers from time to time and not just on a one-off basis. So even if a reasonable initial assessment had been made to accept business in 2011, that decision could be reversed if Options thought it appropriate to do so. And in this case, I note that Options decided to reverse its decision to accept business from CV4L (and all other unregulated introducers) in November 2013.

In this case, Options gathered information to carry out a due diligence assessment in 2012 using the unregulated introducer profile form referred to above. The due diligence assessment used a form headed “UK introducer assessment proforma”. The version of this form I've seen is not dated, but I note the regulator is referred to on the form as the FCA, rather than the FSA. The FSA was replaced by the FCA in April 2013, so the form, and therefore the due diligence assessment, would seem to have been completed after April 2013.

The due diligence assessment proforma form seems to have been completed by Options using the information from the unregulated introducer profile which was signed in September 2012. As mentioned above, all that information had been provided after Mr S's application in February 2012. It is my view that this analysis should have been carried out in 2011 before agreeing to accept any business from CV4L, and certainly before accepting Mr S's SIPP application and investment instructions in early 2012.

The 2013 introducer assessment proforma

Options has said it chose to stop accepting business from CV4L as a result of a business decision to stop accepting introductions from unregulated introducers generally. It must follow that the decision was not made as a result of the assessment made based on the proforma. I conclude from this, that Options either decided to continue to accept business based on that assessment, or it failed to complete its due diligence assessment and so just continued to accept business from CV4L by default until it made its business decision relating to all unregulated introducers.

Whatever the reason, I have considered the contents of the proforma and whether it was reasonable to continue to accept business from CV4L in the light of the assessment it should reasonably have made based on that proforma.

The introducer assessment proforma form used a red, amber, and green system for grading the information provided by a potential (or in the case of CV4L, an actual) introducer. Green equated to what Options called low risk, amber to medium risk and red to high risk.

The form had three sections:

- company personnel and advice
- client profile
- investment

And the end of the form said:

“Accept:	Low risk
	All green
Queries to raise:	Medium Risk
	Mixture of Green and Amber
	Raise with TRC before proceeding
Decline:	High Risk
	All Red
	Or Mixture of red and Amber
	Issue standard letter/email and decline.”

So, to pause there for a moment, by the time Options was using this form, it was satisfied that in its role as a non-advisory SIPP operator it could make checks on an introducer and choose not to accept business from the introducer if it thought that was the appropriate thing to do.

The form had around 20 cells that could be completed in a column headed “Results from Introducer Enquiry”. On the completed form I have seen one was rated red. One was rated amber, and two more had amber written in them by hand. Three were rated green. The rest had not been completed. Some had information written in them with no colour code applied. Most were left blank.

In the client profile section three cells had not been graded. The cells related to the following:

- Detail whether clients are UK or non-UK residents: The following alternative answers were given:
 - Green/Low Risk: Non-UK Residents
UK Residents and Company has relevant permissions
 - Amber/medium risk: UK residents through another entity (Need to carry out DD on this other entity)
 - Red/High Risk UK Residents but there is no evidence of any entity having relevant permissions.
- Detail average value of typical clients’ pension: the following alternative answers were given:

- Green/low risk: £25K & above to regulated investments
- Amber/medium risk: £25K & above to mix of regulated and non-regulated investments
- Red/High Risk: £25K & above to non-regulated investments
Less than £25K to full SIPP/ non-regulated investment SIPP

• Detail client profile as described by company: The following alternative answers were given:

- Green/low risk: Fully advised
- Amber/medium risk: Execution only high-net-worth/sophisticated investor
- Red/high risk: Execution only client
Not high-net-worth or sophisticated investor

The answer to the first question should have been recorded as amber, since CV4L was dealing with UK clients, but apparently involving a UK IFA. According to the proforma, this meant Options should also have carried out “DD” – due diligence – on the IFA(s). I note that reference has been made to CV4L working with 1 Stop Financial Services and The Financial Planning Partnership. I don’t know if Options carried out due diligence on these firms.

I note that in 2014, two partners in 1 Stop Financial Services were subject to disciplinary sanction by the FCA. The regulator had taken action in relation to that firm’s business model between October 2010 and November 2012. The two partners were fined and banned from performing any significant influence function in relation to any regulated activity. According to the FCA, 1 Stop Financial Services had advised customers to switch their pensions to SIPPs which enabled them to invest in unregulated and often high-risk products regardless of whether those products were suitable.

1 Stop Financial Services’ business model involved receiving introductions from unregulated introducers who typically promoted investments such as overseas property investments. 1 Stop Financial Services would then give advice on the suitability of switching an existing pension to a SIPP to make that investment. It did not give advice on the suitability of the investment.

I do not say that Options ought to have been aware of action taken by the regulator against the 1 Stop Financial Services partners before its decision was published. But I do consider that Options could and should have found out about 1 Stop Financial Services’ business model.

In relation to that business model, on 18 January 2013, the FSA issued an alert which included the following:

“Advising on pension transfers with a view to investing pension monies into unregulated products through a SIPP

It has been brought to the FSA’s attention that some financial advisers are giving advice to customers on pension transfers or pension switches without assessing the advantages and disadvantages of investments proposed to be held within the new pension. In particular, we have seen financial advisers moving customers' retirement savings to self-invested personal pensions (SIPPs) that invest wholly or primarily in high risk often highly illiquid unregulated investments (some of which may be Unregulated Collective Investment Schemes). Examples of the unregulated investments are diamonds, overseas property developments, storepods, forestry and film schemes, among other non-mainstream propositions.

The cases we have seen tend to operate under a similar advice model. An introducer will pass customer details to an unregulated firm, which markets an unregulated investment (eg an overseas property development). When the customer expresses an interest in the unregulated investment, the customer is introduced to a regulated financial adviser to provide advice on the unregulated investment. The financial adviser does not give advice on the unregulated investments and says it is only providing advice on a SIPP capable of holding the unregulated investment...

The FSA is investigating a number of firms and has secured a variation of their Part IV permission so that they are unable to continue operating in that way. The FSA is also considering taking enforcement action against these firms.

We have seen cases where, as a result of these advisory strategies involving unauthorised firms, customers have transferred out of more traditional pension schemes and invested their retirement savings wholly in unregulated assets via SIPPs, taking very high and often entirely unsuitable levels of risk despite receiving advice on the pension transfer from regulated firms.

...Financial advisers using this advice model are under the mistaken impression that this process means they do not have to consider the unregulated investment as part of their advice to invest in the SIPP and that they only need to consider the suitability of the SIPP in the abstract. This is incorrect.

The FSA's view is that the provision of suitable advice generally requires consideration of the investment held by the customer or, when advice is given on a product which is a vehicle for investment in other products (such as a SIPP and other wrappers), consideration of the suitability of the overall proposition, that is the wrapper and the expected underlying investments in unregulated schemes....

For example, where a financial adviser recommends a SIPP knowing that the customer will transfer out of a current pension arrangement to release funds to invest in an overseas property investment under a SIPP, then the suitability of the overseas property investment must form part of the advice about whether the customer should transfer into the SIPP..."

Mr S's SIPP application was sent to Options before this alert. So, whilst Options wouldn't have known about the alert when it received Mr S's SIPP application, it should, as I have said, have been aware of 1 Stop Financial Services' business model, and the implications it had for its SIPP members, from the due diligence it ought to have carried out on the firm.

Had it done so, Options would've understood its members were apparently choosing to invest in unregulated, high-risk speculative investments with the very considerable risk of suffering significant detriment, without the benefit of regulated financial advice in relation to the investment.

Clearly Options could not have known before Mr S's application that the owners of 1 Stop Financial Services would, in 2014, be fined and banned for their work in relation to SIPPs.

But what it could and should have known, was that the IFA CV4L said it was involved with was giving no advice on the suitability of the unregulated investment for CV4L's clients. This meant that the involvement of a regulated IFA should not have provided the comfort to Options that it might otherwise have done. It meant that Options' potential new clients from CV4L were not getting advice from an authorised and regulated financial adviser on the suitability of their investing potentially all of their pension in an unregulated investment Options considered to be high risk and speculative. So, it knew, or should have known that the business model CV4L was involved in lacked the safeguard of effective independent regulated advice. So, the involvement of the IFA with its business model ought to have been a red flag item that should have given Options concerns.

I note that 1 Stop Financial Services had been operating its business model since before CV4L first became an introducer and that business model had therefore been discoverable if Options had carried out checks on that firm in 2011.

The other IFA firm CV4L said it worked with was The Financial Planning Partnership. As I understand it, The Financial Planning Partnership was a trading name used by another business that I'll call Business F. According to the FCA register, Business F was using the trading name The Financial Planning Partnership from 2009.

And as I understand it, The Financial Planning Partnership/Business F also operated a business model with an unregulated introducer of the type highlighted by the FSA in its alert. So again, if Options had carried out checks on that firm before it stopped trading, it is likely it would also have given cause for concern rather than comfort.

The above points relating to the two IFA firms CV4L said it worked with also mean that the following question in the company personnel and advice section of the proforma document that was rated amber should have been reconsidered:

- Does the company hold FCA or Equivalent permissions for investment advice?
No but this is provided by FCA regulated professional (Need to complete further DD in respect of this adviser.)

Returning to the proforma assessment, CV4L was only introducing clients to invest in unregulated investments and their clients were not high-net-worth or sophisticated investors, so the next two questions should have been rated as red.

In the investment section of the proforma, there is an amber and a green cell. The rest are not completed. The answers to the questions which have not been completed should have been graded as red:

- Are investments generally used regulated or unregulated – all unregulated (red answer).
- Which countries are investments generally based in – other overseas [i.e. not UK or EEA] (red answer).
- Does company promote unregulated investments, state which investments are promoted - yes, Salinas Sea. (red answer).
- Detail investment type most often used – non EEA commercial property, non-regulated investments, unquoted shares, loans. (red answer).

Having considered the proforma, it is my view that in 2012/2013 Options carried out an incomplete assessment. Had it completed its assessment, based on its own process, it would have come out with an assessment showing considerably more red answers than the incomplete assessment it carried out.

Based on its own processes, I think Options should have concluded that as the form showed, or should have shown, mostly red and amber assessments, it should have declined to do further business with CV4L.

What Options ought to have decided:

In my view, Options ought to have gathered information on which it could and should reasonably have made an assessment prior to accepting introductions from CV4L. Had it done so, I'm satisfied it should have come to the conclusion not to accept introductions from CV4L before it received Mr S's application in February 2012.

I think Options should have carried out its proforma based assessment, or an essentially similar assessment, before it first agreed to accept introductions from CV4L. If it had done so it would have rejected CV4L's request to act as an introducer. Alternatively, if it carried out such an exercise within a short time of allowing introductions without first carrying out the assessment in full, it should have decided not to continue to accept business from CV4L.

In either event, it is my opinion that if Options had acted reasonably, in a way that was consistent with its role as a non-advisory SIPP operator, in a way that was consistent with its obligations in that role under the Principles, and with good industry practice, it would not have accepted business from CV4L by the time of Mr S's application. And so, Mr S's application would have been refused.

By the time of Mr S's application, Options should have carried out due diligence checks in relation to CV4L and the Salinas Sea investment which would have meant it knew CV4L:

- was involved in promoting the Salinas Sea investment.
- Became an introducer to Options in order to introduce clients to invest in Salinas Sea within their pensions while Options considered Salinas Sea to be an unregulated high risk and speculative alternative investment.
- Was not authorised to give regulated investment advice.
- Apparently worked with regulated IFAs in some circumstances but not in all cases and that it would make direct introductions to Options on the basis that the client was acting on an execution only basis.
- Had mostly clients that could not reasonably be classified as high net worth or as sophisticated investors.
- Was receiving commission of around 8%.

In addition to these points, Options knew or should reasonably have known the investment was likely to be highly illiquid. It knew or should have known the investment was likely to be difficult to value and that it might well be difficult to sell when the member wanted to take benefits from their pension.

Options knew or should have known that it was unlikely that an ordinary retail investor client such as Mr S, would choose to transfer their personal pension to a SIPP without advice. And Options knew or should have known that it did not have a good understanding of the way CV4L operated and in particular how it found its clients. For example, on the introducer profile CV4L said it obtained its clients from a “UK Distributions Network”, without any recorded explanation of what that meant in practice. And the sales process was described as “mainly pension review/non reg” again without any recorded explanation of what that meant.

Options also knew that investing in an unregulated alternative investment that is high risk and speculative is unsuitable for most retail investors and that it is only likely to be suitable for high-net-worth or sophisticated investors on the basis that such an investment makes up only a small proportion of their portfolio.

When Options agreed to accept business from CV4L, it did not impose conditions on it such as for example only accepting such business where regulated advice had been given and/or only business involving high-net-worth or sophisticated investors, and/or only allowing a limited proportion of the SIPP fund to be invested in Salinas Sea.

Taking all these points into account, Options knew, or should have known when agreeing to accept introductions from CV4L that there was a real risk of customer detriment. Options’ response to this was to require potential clients to sign the declaration I referred to above.

In my view, that was not a fair and reasonable approach bearing in mind the Principles and good industry practice. I think the fair and reasonable approach would have been to decline to accept business from CV4L as Options’ own process on its own proforma assessment form provided for, or as any reasonable and similar process would have provided for.

Was it fair and reasonable to proceed with Mr S’s instructions?

In my view, for the reasons given, Options should have refused to accept Mr S’s SIPP application. So, things should not have gone beyond that.

Mr S was asked to sign the declaration. The declaration gave warnings about the high-risk speculative nature of the Salinas Sea investment. And it included a declaration that Mr S wouldn’t hold Options responsible for any losses resulting from the investment. However, I do not think this document demonstrates that Options acted fairly and reasonably in proceeding with Mr S’s instructions.

Asking Mr S to sign the declaration and indemnity absolving Options of all its responsibilities when it ought to have known that Mr S’s dealings with CV4L were putting him at significant risk of detriment was not the fair and reasonable thing to do. And it was not an effective way for Options to meet its regulatory obligations in the circumstances. It was not fair and reasonable to proceed on that basis.

Further, I do not consider it fair and reasonable for Options to avoid responsibility now on the basis of the indemnity Mr S signed. Had Options acted appropriately in the circumstances, Mr S should not have been able to proceed with his application. And, as mentioned, he should not have got to the stage of signing the declaration.

Is it fair to require Options to compensate Mr S?

For completeness, I’ve also considered a point I’m aware Options has raised on similar cases that it did not cause members’ losses because it was very likely that they were keen to proceed with the investments and would have found a way to invest even if Options had not been dealing with CV4L. I don’t agree.

I have seen no evidence to show Mr S would have proceeded even if Options had rejected his application.

There is nothing to indicate Mr S was highly motivated to make the investment, or that he was being paid any kind of incentive payment to do so. I have not seen anything that makes me think Mr S would have sought out another SIPP provider if Options had declined the application, or terminated the application, and explained why. In any event, I think any SIPP provider acting fairly and reasonably should have reached the conclusion it should not deal with CV4L. I do not think it would be fair to say Mr S should not be compensated based on speculation that another SIPP operator might have made the same mistakes as Options did.

I think it's fair and reasonable instead to assume that another SIPP provider would have complied with its regulatory obligations and good industry practice, and therefore wouldn't have accepted the application, or would have terminated the transaction before completion.

I've decided to uphold Mr S's complaint on the basis that Options shouldn't have accepted his introduction from CV4L. I therefore don't consider it necessary to consider whether CV4L carried out any regulated activities in breach of the general prohibition that Options ought to have been aware of. Or, whether or not Options should've allowed the Salinas Sea investment into Mr S's SIPP. I make no finding about the appropriateness of the investment for the Options SIPP which Mr S opened.

Fair compensation

I consider that Options failed to comply with its regulatory obligations and good industry practice and did not reject Mr S's application to open a SIPP in order to invest in Salinas Sea. My aim in awarding fair compensation is to put Mr S back into the position he would likely have been in had it not been for Options' failings. Had Options acted appropriately, I think it's more likely than not that Mr S would have remained a member of the ceding schemes he transferred into the SIPP.

I think Mr S would have remained with his previous providers, however I cannot be certain that a value will be obtainable for what the previous policies would now be worth. I am satisfied what I have set out below is fair and reasonable, taking this into account and given what I understand of Mr S's circumstances.

Through my provisional decision I invited both parties to provide any available information they hold regarding the ceding schemes to confirm whether guaranteed benefits were present or not. I also asked if Mr S thinks he would have taken pension benefits by now had he been able to.

Neither party provided any further information or evidence.

As I've seen no evidence that the pensions Mr S transferred to his SIPP contained any guaranteed benefits that were lost on transfer, or that Mr S would've already taken benefits from his pension had he not opened his SIPP with Options and invested in Salinas Sea – my direction for Options' calculation of redress reflects my understanding that no guaranteed benefits were lost and Mr S wouldn't have taken any benefits yet.

Putting things right

I consider that Options failed to comply with its own regulatory obligations and didn't put a stop to the transactions that are the subject of this complaint. My aim in awarding fair compensation is to put Mr S, as far as possible, into the position he would now be in had it not been for Options' failings. Had Options acted appropriately, I think it's most likely that Mr S would've remained a member of the existing pensions he transferred into the SIPP.

In light of the above, I require Options to do the following:

- Obtain the notional transfer value of Mr S's previous pension plans as at the date of this final decision.
- Obtain the actual transfer value of Mr S's SIPP, including any outstanding charges as at the date of this final decision.
- Pay a commercial value to buy any illiquid investments (or treat them as having a zero value) and take responsibility for any mortgage linked to the SIPP.
- Pay an amount into Mr S's SIPP so as to increase the transfer value to equal the notional value established. This payment should take account of any available tax relief and the effect of charges. Options may need to add interest to this payment if it is not made within 28 days of notification of Mr S's acceptance of this final decision.
- If the SIPP needs to be kept open only because of the illiquid investments and is used only or substantially to hold those assets, then any future SIPP fees should be waived until the SIPP can be closed.
- If Mr S has paid any fees or charges from funds outside of his pension arrangements, Options should also refund these to Mr S. Interest at a rate of 8% simple per year from date of payment to date of refund should be added to this.
- Pay to Mr S an amount of £500 to compensate him for the distress and inconvenience he's been caused as a result of Options' failings.

I've set out how Options should go about calculating compensation in more detail below.

Calculate the loss Mr S has suffered as a result of making the transfer Options should first contact the providers of the existing personal pensions which were transferred into Mr S's SIPP and ask them to provide a notional value for the policies as at the date of this final decision. For the purposes of the notional calculation, the providers should be told to assume no monies would've been transferred away from the plans, and the monies in the policies would've remained invested in an identical manner to that which existed prior to the actual transfer.

Any contributions or withdrawals Mr S has made will need to be taken into account whether the notional value is established by the ceding providers or calculated as set out below.

Any withdrawal out of the SIPP should be deducted at the point it was actually paid so it ceases to accrue any return in the calculation from that point on. The same applies for any contributions made, these should be added to the notional calculation from the date they were actually paid, so any growth they would've enjoyed is allowed for.

If there are any difficulties in obtaining a notional valuation from the previous providers, then Options should instead arrive at a notional valuation by assuming the monies would have enjoyed a return in line with the FTSE UK Private Investors Income Total Return Index (prior to 1 March 2017, this was called the FTSE WMA Stock Market Income Total Return Index). That is a reasonable proxy for the type of return that could have been achieved over the period in question.

The notional value of Mr S's ceding schemes if monies hadn't been transferred (established in line with the above) less the transfer value of the SIPP (as at the date of this final decision.) amounts to Mr S's financial loss.

Treatment of the illiquid assets held within the SIPP

As set out at the outset of this section of my decision and outlined in the investigator's assessment of this complaint, our aim in putting things right is to put Mr S into the position he would likely have been in had it not been for Options' failings. The outcome of this should be that, in so far as is possible, finality is brought to the matter about which Mr S complains for both parties to the complaint. Had Options acted appropriately, I think it's more likely than not that Mr S would not have invested in Salinas Sea and would not have entered into any loan arrangement to finance part of the purchase of the investment.

My understanding is that Oasis offered financing for up to 35% of the purchase price (under the terms of the Salinas Sea investment the interest on the lending is set at Euribor 6 (six) month rate plus 5.8%), which would be repaid by way of the rental payments from the investment. If Mr S utilised this financing and has an outstanding balance then Options must settle this with Oasis, how it goes about doing this is a matter for Options and Oasis but the outcome of this must be that this isn't an ongoing concern for Mr S and that there is no risk of him having to pay anything in connection with this. To be clear, this should be the resultant position whether or not the asset is removed from the SIPP (as per the below).

I think any illiquid assets held should be removed from the SIPP. Mr S would then be able to close the SIPP, if he wishes. That would then allow him to stop paying the fees for the SIPP. The valuation of the illiquid investment(s) may prove difficult, as there is no market for it/them. For calculating compensation, Options should establish an amount it's willing to accept for the investment(s) as a commercial value. Given that both the investment provider and the underlying investment are ongoing concerns, I expect this to be achievable. It should then pay the sum agreed plus any costs and take ownership of the investment(s) and ensure that in doing so it takes on or otherwise removes all liability Mr S may have for any financing taken out to part fund the purchase of the investment(s).

If Options is able to purchase the illiquid investment(s) then the price paid to purchase the holding(s) will be allowed for in the current transfer value (because it will have been paid into the SIPP to secure the holding(s)).

If Options is unable, or if there are any difficulties in buying Mr S's illiquid investment(s), it should give the holding(s) a nil value for the purposes of calculating compensation. In this instance Options must still take on or otherwise remove all liability Mr S may have for any financing taken out to part fund the purchase of the investment(s). If the total calculated redress in this complaint is less than £160,000, Options may ask Mr S to provide an undertaking to account to it for the net amount of any payment the SIPP may receive from the relevant holding(s). That undertaking should allow for the effect of any tax and charges on the amount Mr S may receive from the investment(s) and any eventual sums he would be able to access from the SIPP. Options will have to meet the cost of drawing up any such undertaking.

If the total calculated redress in this complaint is greater than £160,000 and Options doesn't pay the recommended amount (set out below), Mr S should retain the rights to any future return from the investment(s) until such time as any future benefit that he receives from the investment(s) together with the compensation paid by Options (excluding any interest) equates to the total calculated redress amount in this complaint. Options may ask Mr S to provide an undertaking to account to it for the net amount of any further payment the SIPP may receive from these investment(s) thereafter. That undertaking should allow for the effect of any tax and charges on the amount Mr S may receive from the investment(s) from that point, and any eventual sums he would be able to access from the SIPP. As above, Options will need to meet any costs in drawing up the undertaking.

If the total calculated redress in this complaint is greater than £160,000, Options must in the first instance take on or otherwise remove all liability Mr S may have for any financing taken out to part fund the purchase of the investment(s) so as to ensure that Mr S is left unencumbered by this.

Pay an amount into Mr S's SIPP so that the transfer value is increased by the loss calculated above.

Since the loss Mr S has suffered is within his pension, it is right that I try to restore the value of his pension provision if that is possible. So, if the redress calculations demonstrate a loss, the compensation should if possible be paid into Mr S's pension plan. The payment should allow for the effect of charges and any available tax relief. The compensation shouldn't be paid into the pension plan if it would conflict with any existing protection or allowance.

If a payment into the pension isn't possible or has protection or allowance implications, it should be paid directly to Mr S as a lump sum after making a notional deduction to allow for income tax that would otherwise have been paid. Redress paid to Mr S as a cash lump sum includes compensation in respect of benefits that would otherwise have provided a taxable income. So, Options may make a notional deduction to cash lump sum payments to take account of tax that consumers would otherwise pay on income from their pension. Typically, 25% of the loss could have been taken as tax-free cash and 75% would have been taxed according to his likely income tax rate in retirement – presumed to be 20%. So, making a notional deduction of 15% overall from the loss adequately reflects this.

SIPP fees

If Options doesn't take ownership of the investment(s), and it/they continue to be held in Mr S's SIPP, there will be ongoing fees in relation to the administration of that SIPP. Mr S would not be responsible for those fees if Options hadn't accepted the transfer of his previous pensions into the SIPP. So, I think it is fair and reasonable that Options must waive any SIPP fees until such a time as Mr S can dispose of the investment(s) and close the SIPP.

Fees and charges paid outside the SIPP

If Mr S has paid any fees or charges from funds outside of his pension arrangements, Options should also refund these to Mr S. Interest at a rate of 8% simple per year from date of payment to date of refund should be added to this.

Income tax may be payable on any interest paid. If Options deducts income tax from the interest, it should tell Mr S how much has been taken off. Options should give Mr S a tax deduction certificate in respect of interest if Mr S asks for one, so he can reclaim the tax on interest from HMRC if appropriate.

Distress & inconvenience

I think Mr S will have been caused considerable distress and inconvenience in relation to his SIPP and investment. I note that he consulted a CMC and made a complaint some years ago now. I think the understanding that Mr S is not free to take his pension benefits at a time of his choosing because of the illiquidity of the Salinas Sea investment will have caused significant worry and upset to Mr S over and above his financial loss. I consider that a payment of £500 is appropriate to compensate for that.

Interest

The compensation must be paid as set out above within 28 days of the date Options receives notification of Mr S's acceptance of this final decision. Interest must be added to the compensation amount at the rate of 8% per year simple from the date of this decision to the date of settlement if the compensation is not paid within 28 days.

Determination and money award: my final decision is that I require that Options pay Mr S compensation as set out above, up to a maximum of £160,000 plus any interest payable.

Until the calculations are carried out, I don't know how much the compensation will be, and it may be nowhere near £160,000, which is the maximum sum that I'm able to award in Mr S's complaint. But I'll also make a recommendation below in the event the compensation is to exceed this sum, although I can't require that Options pays this.

Recommendation: If the amount produced by the calculation of fair compensation exceeds £160,000, I also recommend that Options pays Mr S the balance.

If Mr S accepts this decision, the money award and the requirements of the decision will be binding on Options. My recommendation won't be binding on Options.

Further, it's unlikely that Mr S will be able to accept my determination and go to court to ask for the balance of the compensation owing to him after the money award has been paid. Mr S may want to consider getting independent legal advice before deciding whether to accept this decision.

My final decision

It's my final decision to uphold Mr S's complaint. I require Options UK Personal Pensions LLP to calculate and pay the award, and take the actions, set out above.

Under the rules of the Financial Ombudsman Service, I'm required to ask Mr S to accept or reject my decision before 24 April 2024.
