

The complaint

Mr N's complaint is, in essence, that Shawbrook Bank Limited (the 'Lender') acted unfairly and unreasonably by (1) being party to an unfair credit relationship with him under Section 140A of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 (as amended) (the 'CCA') and (2) deciding against paying claims under Section 75 of the CCA.

Background to the Complaint

Mr N – along with his partner, purchased membership of a timeshare (the 'Fractional Club') from a timeshare provider (the 'Supplier') on 23 March 2016 (the 'Time of Sale'). They entered into an agreement with the Supplier to buy 900 fractional points at a cost of £14,989 (the 'Purchase Agreement').

Fractional Club membership was asset backed – which meant it gave Mr N and his partner more than just holiday rights. It also included a share in the net sale proceeds of a property named on the Purchase Agreement (the 'Allocated Property') after their membership term ends.

Mr N paid for the Fractional Club membership by taking finance of £14,989 from the Lender (the 'Credit Agreement'). Although Mr N is the only eligible complainant, I will also refer to his partner where it makes sense to do so.

Mr N – using a professional representative (the 'PR') – wrote to the Lender on 2 November 2020 (the 'Letter of Complaint') to raise a number of different concerns. As those concerns haven't changed since they were first raised, and as both sides are familiar with them, it isn't necessary to repeat them in detail here beyond the summary above. The Lender dealt with Mr N's concerns as a complaint and issued its final response letter on 23 April 2021, rejecting it on every ground.

The complaint was then referred to the Financial Ombudsman Service. It was assessed by an Investigator who, having considered the information on file, rejected the complaint on its merits.

Mr N disagreed with the Investigator's assessment and asked for an Ombudsman's decision – which is why it was passed to me.

I issued my provisional findings to the parties on 4 September 2025.

In my provisional decision, I said:

"I have considered all the available evidence and arguments to decide what is fair and reasonable in the circumstances of this complaint. And having done that, I do not currently think this complaint should be upheld.

However, before I explain why, I want to make it clear that my role as an Ombudsman is not to address every single point that has been made to date. Instead, it is to decide what is fair and reasonable in the circumstances of this complaint. So, if I have not commented on, or referred to, something that either party has said, that does not mean I have not considered it.

Section 75 of the CCA: the Supplier's misrepresentations at the Time of Sale

The CCA introduced a regime of connected lender liability under section 75 that affords consumers ("debtors") a right of recourse against lenders that provide the finance for the acquisition of goods or services from third-party merchants ("suppliers") in the event that there is an actionable misrepresentation and/or breach of contract by the supplier.

Certain conditions must be met if the protection afforded to consumers is engaged, including, for instance, the cash price of the purchase and the nature of the arrangements between the parties involved in the transaction. The Lender doesn't dispute that the relevant conditions are met. But for reasons I'll come on to below, it isn't necessary to make any formal findings on them here.

It was said in the Letter of Complaint that Fractional Club membership had been misrepresented by the Supplier at the Time of Sale because Mr N was:

- (1) told by the Supplier that the Fractional Club membership would allow him to book holidays in locations such as the Bahamas, Las Vegas, Dubai and Bora Bora.
- (2) told by the Supplier that the Fractional Club membership would last for 19 years.
- (3) told by the Supplier that they were buying an interest in a specific piece of "property" when that was not true.
- (4) told by the Supplier that Fractional Club membership was an "investment" when that was not true.

I have not been given sufficient evidence to support the allegation in point (1) that Mr N was told he could book holidays in those locations, or that he was unable to use his points to book those holidays, either directly with the Supplier, or indirectly through the external exchange membership Mr N gained as part of his purchase.

The words and/or phrases allegedly used by the Supplier to misrepresent Fractional Club for the reason given in point (2) were set out by the PR in the Letter of Complaint, and they were limited to: "the Fractional contract would last for 19 years".

The PR says that such a representation was untrue because the "Sales Process" begins on the Sale Date as defined in the Fractional Club Rules, and that was on 31 December 2032.

However, I cannot see why the Supplier would have told Mr N the membership would end after 19 years when this is directly contradicted in the supporting paperwork. Further, I've not been given any reasons why such a representation would have made any difference to Mr N's decision to purchase the Fractional Club membership.

In any case, I cannot see why the phrase above would have been untrue at the Time of Sale even if it was said. It seems to me to reflect the main thrust of the contract Mr N entered into. And while, under Rules 9.1 and 9.2.9 of the relevant Fractional Club Rules, the sale of the Allocated Property could be postponed for up to two years by the 'Vendor'¹, longer than that if there were problems selling and the 'Owners'² agreed, or for an otherwise specified period provided there was unanimous agreement in writing from the Owners, that does not render

² Defined in the FPOC Rules as "a purchaser who has entered into a Purchase Agreement and has been issued with a Fractional Rights Certificate (which shall include the Vendor for such period of time until the maximum number of Fractional Rights have been acquired)."

the representation above untrue. So, I am not persuaded that the representation above constituted a false statement of fact even if it was made.

As for points (3) and (4), neither of these strike me as misrepresentations even if such representations had been made by the Supplier (which I make no formal finding on). Telling prospective members that they were investing their money because they were buying a fraction or share of one of the Supplier's properties was not untrue – nor was it untrue to tell prospective members that they would receive some money when the allocated property is sold. After all, a share in an allocated property was clearly the purchase of a share of the net sale proceeds of a specific property in a specific resort. And while the PR might question the exact legal mechanism used to give prospective members that interest, it did not change the fact that they acquired such an interest.

So, while I recognise that Mr N - and the PR - have concerns about the way in which Fractional Club membership was sold by the Supplier, when looking at the claim under Section 75 of the CCA, I can only consider whether there was a factual and material misrepresentation by the Supplier. For the reasons I've set out above, I'm not persuaded that there was. And that means that I don't think that the Lender acted unreasonably or unfairly when it dealt with this particular Section 75 claim.

Section 75 of the CCA: the Supplier's Breach of Contract

I have already summarised how Section 75 of the CCA works and why it gives consumers a right of recourse against a lender. So, it is not necessary to repeat that here other than to say that, if I find that the Supplier is liable for having breached the Purchase Agreement, the Lender is also liable.

Mr N says that he could not holiday where and when he wanted to, specifically, in the locations I've listed above. That was framed, in the Letter of Complaint, as part of his complaint about the fairness or otherwise of his credit relationship with the Lender under Section 140A of the CCA. However, on my reading of the complaint, this suggests that the Supplier was not living up to its end of the bargain, potentially breaching the Purchase Agreement.

I accept that Mr N and his family may not have been able to take certain holidays. But I have not seen enough to persuade me that the Supplier had breached the terms of the Purchase Agreement.

So, from the evidence I have seen, I do not think the Lender is liable to pay Mr N any compensation for a breach of contract by the Supplier. And with that being the case, I do not think the Lender acted unfairly or unreasonably in relation to this aspect of the complaint either.

Section 140A of the CCA: did the Lender participate in an unfair credit relationship?

I've already explained why I'm not persuaded that Fractional Club membership was actionably misrepresented by the Supplier at the Time of Sale. But there are other aspects of the sales process that, being the subject of dissatisfaction, I must explore with Section 140A in mind if I'm to consider this complaint in full – which is what I've done next.

Having considered the entirety of the credit relationship between Mr N and the Lender along with all of the circumstances of the complaint, I don't think the credit relationship between them was likely to have been rendered unfair for the purposes of Section 140A. When coming to that conclusion, and in carrying out my analysis, I have looked at:

- (1) The standard of the Supplier's commercial conduct – which includes its sales and marketing practices at the Time of Sale along with any relevant training material;
- (2) The provision of information by the Supplier at the Time of Sale, including the contractual documentation and disclaimers made by the Supplier;
- (3) Evidence provided by both parties on what was likely to have been said and/or done at the Time of Sale; and
- (4) The inherent probabilities of the sale given its circumstances.

I have then considered the impact of these on the fairness of the credit relationship between Mr N and the Lender.

The Supplier's sales & marketing practices at the Time of Sale

Mr N's complaint about the Lender being party to an unfair credit relationship was and is made for several reasons.

They include, for various reasons, the allegation that the Supplier misled Mr N and carried on unfair commercial practices under Regulations 5 and 6 of the CPUT Regulations. However, as Regulations 5 and 6 state, commercial practices only amount to misleading actions or omissions if, in addition to satisfying one or more of the specific matters set out in those provisions, they cause or are likely to cause the average consumer to take a transactional decision they would not have taken otherwise. And as I haven't seen enough evidence to persuade me that, if there were any such actions or omissions at the Time of Sale (which I make no formal finding on), they led Mr N to make the purchasing decision he did, I'm not persuaded that anything done or not done by the Supplier amounted to an unfair commercial practice for the purposes of those provisions.

In addition, the PR also says that:

- (1) the right checks weren't carried out before the Lender lent to Mr N.
- (2) Mr N was pressured by the Supplier into purchasing Fractional Club membership at the Time of Sale.
- (3) there was one or more unfair contract terms in the Purchase Agreement.

However, as things currently stand, none of these strike me as reasons why this complaint should succeed.

I haven't seen anything to persuade me that the right checks weren't carried out by the Lender given this complaint's circumstances. But even if I were to find that the Lender failed to do everything it should have when it agreed to lend (and I make no such finding), I would have to be satisfied that the money lent to Mr N was actually unaffordable before also concluding that he lost out as a result and then consider whether the credit relationship with the Lender was unfair to him for this reason. But from the information provided, I am not satisfied that the lending was unaffordable for Mr N.

I acknowledge that Mr N may have felt weary after a sales process that went on for a long time. But he says little about what was said and/or done by the Supplier during the sales presentation that made him feel as if he had no choice but to purchase Fractional Club membership when he simply did not want to. He and his partner were also given a 14-day cooling off period. Indeed, Mr N says that the Supplier called him "every day" within that period to make sure he still wished to proceed. So, I struggle to understand why they did not cancel their membership during that time. And with all of that being the case, there is insufficient evidence to demonstrate that Mr N made the decision to purchase Fractional Club membership because his ability to exercise that choice was significantly impaired by pressure from the Supplier.

The PR also alleges that the Supplier acted unfairly under Section 7 (1) of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999. But given the limited specific evidence presented to me over the course of this complaint, I am not persuaded that the Supplier did.

Overall, therefore, I don't think that Mr N's credit relationship with the Lender was rendered unfair to him under Section 140A for any of the reasons above. But there is another reason, perhaps the main reason, why the PR now says the credit relationship with the Lender was unfair to Mr N. And that's the suggestion that Fractional Club membership was marketed and sold to Mr N and his partner as an investment in breach of prohibition against selling timeshares in that way.

The Supplier's alleged breach of Regulation 14(3) of the Timeshare Regulations

The Lender does not dispute, and I am satisfied, that Mr N's Fractional Club membership met the definition of a "timeshare contract" and was a "regulated contract" for the purposes of the Timeshare Regulations.

Regulation 14(3) of the Timeshare Regulations prohibited the Supplier from marketing or selling Fractional Club membership as an investment. This is what the provision said at the Time of Sale:

"A trader must not market or sell a proposed timeshare contract or long-term holiday product contract as an investment if the proposed contract would be a regulated contract."

But the PR and Mr N and his partner say that the Supplier did exactly that at the Time of Sale – saying, in summary, that they were told by the Supplier that Fractional Club membership was "an investment in property".

The term "investment" is not defined in the Timeshare Regulations. But for the purposes of this provisional decision, and by reference to the decided authorities, an investment is a transaction in which money or other property is laid out in the expectation or hope of financial gain or profit.

A share in the Allocated Property clearly constituted an investment as it offered Mr N the prospect of a financial return – whether or not, like all investments, that was more than what he first put into it. But it is important to note at this stage that the fact that Fractional Club membership included an investment element did not, itself, transgress the prohibition in Regulation 14(3). That provision prohibits the marketing and selling of a timeshare contract as an investment. It doesn't prohibit the mere existence of an investment element in a timeshare contract or prohibit the marketing and selling of such a timeshare contract per se.

In other words, the Timeshare Regulations did not ban products such as the Fractional Club. They just regulated how such products were marketed and sold.

To conclude, therefore, that the Fractional Club membership was marketed or sold to Mr N and his partner as an investment in breach of Regulation 14(3), I have to be persuaded that it was more likely than not that the Supplier marketed and/or sold membership to them as an investment, i.e. told them or led them to believe that Fractional Club membership offered them the prospect of a financial gain (i.e., a profit) given the facts and circumstances of this complaint.

There is competing evidence in this complaint as to whether Fractional Club membership was marketed and/or sold by the Supplier at the Time of Sale as an investment in breach of regulation 14(3) of the Timeshare Regulations.

On the one hand, it is clear that the Supplier made efforts to avoid specifically describing membership of the Fractional Club as an 'investment' or quantifying to prospective purchasers, such as Mr N, the financial value of his share in the net sales proceeds of the Allocated Property along with the investment considerations, risks and rewards attached to them.

On the other hand, I acknowledge that the Supplier's sales process left open the possibility that the sales representative may have positioned Fractional Club membership as an investment. So, I accept that it's equally possible that Fractional Club membership was marketed and sold to Mr N as an investment in breach of Regulation 14(3).

However, whether or not there was a breach of the relevant prohibition by the Supplier is not ultimately determinative of the outcome in this complaint for reasons I will come on to shortly. And with that being the case, it's not necessary to make a formal finding on that particular issue for the purposes of this decision.

Was the credit relationship between the Lender and the Consumer rendered unfair?

Having found that it was possible that the Supplier breached Regulation 14(3) of the Timeshare Regulations at the Time of Sale, I now need to consider what impact that breach had on the fairness of the credit relationship between Mr N and the Lender under the Credit Agreement and related Purchase Agreement as the case law on Section 140A makes it clear that regulatory breaches do not automatically create unfairness for the purposes of that provision. Such breaches and their consequences (if there are any) must be considered in the round, rather than in a narrow or technical way.

Indeed, it seems to me that, if I am to conclude that a breach of Regulation 14(3) led to a credit relationship between Mr N and the Lender that was unfair to him and warranted relief as a result, whether the Supplier's breach of Regulation 14(3) led him to enter into the Purchase Agreement and the Credit Agreement is an important consideration.

But on my reading of the evidence before me, the prospect of a financial gain from Fractional Club membership was not an important and motivating factor when Mr N decided to go ahead with his purchase. This is because he says the following, in his testimony dated 10 January 2018, which is nearly three years prior to the Letter of Complaint:

"Firstly, we were shown the [Supplier] resorts in Spain and Tenerife, but this was not of interest to us, so [the Supplier] told us all about [a third-party exchange network ('Business I')] and asked us where we want to go ... I must have accepted what they were telling me as [Business I] was the only reason that we agreed ultimately to purchase [the Fractional Club membership]."

Later on, he says:

"We signed the purchase agreement because we were going to get holidays in places like the Atlantis hotel for a cheap price on exchange [with Business I] and that we would be able to get our money back or some of it in 19 years' time."

So, in Mr N's own words, he was only interested in the holidays he could book using the membership he received with Business I. That doesn't mean he wasn't also interested in a share in the Allocated Property. After all, that wouldn't be surprising given the nature of the product at the centre of this complaint. But as Mr N himself doesn't persuade me that his purchase was motivated by the share in the Allocated Property and the possibility of a profit,

I don't think a breach of Regulation 14(3) by the Supplier was likely to have been material to the decision he ultimately made.

On balance, therefore, even if the Supplier had marketed or sold the Fractional Club membership as an investment in breach of Regulation 14(3) of the Timeshare Regulations, I am not persuaded that Mr N's decision to purchase Fractional Club membership at the Time of Sale was motivated by the prospect of a financial gain (i.e., a profit). On the contrary, I think the evidence suggests he would have pressed ahead with his purchase whether or not there had been a breach of Regulation 14(3). And for that reason, I do not think the credit relationship between Mr N and the Lender was unfair to him even if the Supplier had breached Regulation 14(3).

The provision of information by the Supplier at the Time of Sale

The PR says that Mr N were not given sufficient information at the Time of Sale by the Supplier about the ongoing costs of Fractional Club membership. The PR also says that the contractual terms governing the ongoing costs of membership and the consequences of not meeting those costs were unfair contract terms.

As I've already indicated, the case law on Section 140A makes it clear that it does not automatically follow that regulatory breaches create unfairness for the purposes of the unfair relationship provisions. The extent to which such mistakes render a credit relationship unfair must also be determined according to their impact on the complainant.

I acknowledge that it is also possible that the Supplier did not give Mr N sufficient information, in good time, on the various charges they could have been subject to as Fractional Club members in order to satisfy the requirements of Regulation 12 of the Timeshare Regulations (which was concerned with the provision of 'key information'). But even if that was the case, I cannot see that the ongoing costs of membership were applied unfairly in practice. And as neither Mr N nor the PR have persuaded me that they would not have pressed ahead with their purchase had the finer details of the Fractional Club's ongoing costs been disclosed by the Supplier in compliance with Regulation 12, I cannot see why any failings in that regard are likely to be material to the outcome of this complaint given its fact and circumstances.

As for the PR's argument that there were one or more unfair contract terms in the Purchase Agreement, I can't see that any such terms were operated unfairly against Mr N in practice, nor that any such terms led them to behave in a certain way to their detriment. And with that being the case, I'm not persuaded that any of the terms governing Fractional Club membership are likely to have led to an unfairness that warrants a remedy."

In summary, I wasn't minded to think that the Lender acted unfairly or unreasonably when it dealt with Mr N's section 75 claims.

At the time of my provisional decision I deferred my conclusions on the matter of commission disclosure in order to review that issue further. I've since written to the parties setting out my thoughts on why I wasn't persuaded to uphold this aspect of the complaint.

This was because the Lender had supplied information demonstrating that no commission was paid in relation to the arrangements involving Mr N. With that being the case, I wasn't persuaded this position could have led to an inequality of knowledge capable of rendering the credit relationship unfair to Mr N such that the Lender needed to take any action in redress.

I didn't find any of the other arguments put forward demonstrated that the credit agreement between Mr N and the Lender was unfair to him under section 140A of the CCA. Absent any other reason why it would be fair or reasonable to direct the Lender to compensate Mr N, I said I didn't propose to uphold the complaint.

Responses to my provisional findings

The Lender accepted my provisional decision. The PR didn't accept the proposed outcome. It made further submissions in support of Mr N's position. Having received and reviewed these, I'm now proceeding with my final decision.

In doing so, I'm conscious that the PR has made a series of assertions surrounding the provision of information relating to commission arrangements. These include, among other things, expressing doubt that the Lender has provided key information, requesting that the information we have received be shared with it in full, and asking that we do not proceed with a decision before this is done and it has had an opportunity to make further submissions.

For reasons I will explain in the course of this decision, I've concluded that it's appropriate for me to proceed with my determination, the PR's submissions notwithstanding.

The legal and regulatory context

The legal and regulatory context that I think is relevant to this complaint has been shared in several hundred published decisions on very similar complaints, as well as in previous correspondence with the parties. So there's no need for me to set this out again in detail here. I simply remind the parties that our rules³ say that in considering what is fair and reasonable in all the circumstances of the complaint, I will take into account: relevant (i) law and regulations; (ii) regulators' rules, guidance and standards; and (iii) codes of practice; and (where appropriate), what I consider to have been good industry practice at the relevant time.

What I've decided – and why

I've considered all the available evidence and arguments to decide what's fair and reasonable in the circumstances of this complaint.

After considering the case afresh and having regard for what's been said in response to my provisional decision and in my subsequent correspondence, I find it offers no persuasive reason to depart from the conclusions I've previously set out. I'll explain why.

The PR originally raised various points of complaint, such as those giving rise to Mr N's section 75 claim, which I addressed in my provisional decision. In its response, it hasn't made any further comments in relation to most of its original points or said anything that leads me to think it disagrees with my provisional conclusions in relation to those points. So I'll focus here on the points the PR has made in response.

The PR's response to my provisional decision relates mainly to the issue of whether the credit relationship between Mr N and the Lender was unfair per section 140A of the CCA. In particular, the PR has provided more comment in relation to whether the membership was sold to Mr N as an investment at the Time of Sale. It has also made further submissions in support of its position that the payment of a commission by the Lender to the Supplier led to an unfair credit relationship between the Lender and Mr N.

Section 140A of the CCA: did the Lender participate in an unfair credit relationship?

The Supplier's alleged breach of Regulation 14(3) of the Timeshare Regulations

The PR has questioned whether my provisional conclusions run contrary to precedent decisions issued by my ombudsman colleagues and the judgment handed down in Shawbrook & BPF v FOS. I don't believe they do. However, for the avoidance of doubt, other decisions issued by other ombudsmen do not have a precedent effect like some court judgments might, and each ombudsman must determine each case on its own specific facts. Further, the judgment referred to did not make a blanket finding that all products of the type that Mr N purchased were mis-sold in the way the PR appears to be suggesting.

I remind the PR that in my provisional decision I accepted the possibility that Fractional Club membership was marketed and/or sold to Mr N as an investment, in breach of Regulation 14(3). I went on to explain that relevant case law⁴ indicates that in considering the question of relief for any resultant unfairness in the credit relationship, I needed to take into account any material impact of such a breach on Mr N's decision whether to enter into the Purchase and Credit Agreements. It doesn't strike me that doing so flies in the face of either the handed down judgment or previous decisions the PR has mentioned.

While the PR has referred me to Mr N's recollections and the Supplier's training materials, I have already considered these and what was said. And I set out in my provisional decision the reasons why I didn't find that evidence sufficiently persuasive that Mr N's purchase decision would have been any different, given the other motivational factors he had described. Having re-examined Mr N's statements, that remains my view, for the reasons previously given.

So as I said before, whether or not the Supplier marketed or sold Fractional Club membership as an investment in breach of Regulation 14(3), I'm not persuaded Mr N's decision to make the purchase was materially impacted by the prospect of a financial gain. It follows that I find the credit relationship between Mr N and the Lender was not rendered unfair to him for this reason.

The provision of information by the Supplier at the Time of Sale

The PR has asked for the documents the lender has provided to show that no commission was paid. As the PR will be aware, under DISP 3.5.9R I may, where I consider it appropriate, accept information in confidence (so that only an edited version, summary or description is disclosed to the other party). I'm satisfied that agreements between the Lender and the Supplier are commercially sensitive and that the summary information on commission arrangements we've already shared with the PR is appropriate in this case.

While I appreciate the PR would like to have full disclosure of all of the documents and information the Lender has provided, our rules do not require me to provide this when dealing with a complaint.

⁴ Carney and Kerrigan

As I've noted, the PR has disagreed with my provisional conclusions on whether the Lender should pay redress because of an unfair credit relationship arising in connection with commission arrangements between the Lender and the Supplier. The PR says, in summary, that when the overall circumstances of those arrangements are considered in the round, the credit relationship was plainly unfair. In support of this position the PR has expressed, among other things, that:

- The provisional decision doesn't properly apply the Supreme Court's judgment in Hopcraft, Johnson and Wrench, which concluded a range of factors informed whether a credit relationship between a consumer and a lender was unfair
- A conflict of interest existed on the part of the Supplier, who provided neither independent nor competent explanation of the credit
- Failure to disclose payment of commission – irrespective of the size of any payment - was a regulatory breach that goes to the heart of fairness

I appreciate the time the PR has taken to put together its submissions on behalf of Mr N. But I don't find what it has said offers persuasive grounds for me to reach a different conclusion on this issue.

I've previously set out my thoughts on any impact the Supreme Court's conclusions in Hopcraft, Johnson and Wrench has on Mr N's arguments that his credit relationship with the Lender was unfair to him for reasons relating to commission given the facts and circumstances of this complaint.

The PR's response doesn't offer anything that leads me to think that, for the most part, any of the factors it has referenced were in fact at play in Mr N's case. It hasn't, for example, provided evidence to show the existence of commercial or contractual ties that were concealed from Mr N, any persuasive reasons to conclude that the Supplier's role was that of advisor to Mr N, or to show that any other conflict of interest arose from the roles the Supplier did perform.

For such a claim to be successful would require more than the bare assertions that have been made in this case⁵. I'm not persuaded that it is sufficient, as the PR seems to contend, simply to suggest unsubstantiated allegations of fact and require that the Lender disprove them else the credit relationship be deemed unfair.

I'm satisfied the Lender has provided sufficient information in response to my enquiries to enable me to reach a conclusion about its commission arrangements with the Supplier. I've seen nothing in this case that leads me to think what the Lender has said about there being no commission paid is inaccurate. So there's no reason for me to reach a different finding over those commission arrangements.

In its correspondence the PR has emphasised the regulatory breaches connected with a failure to disclose commission payment. I have already set out why in my view this doesn't automatically lead to an unfair credit relationship for which the Lender needs to offer redress. While I've considered all that the PR has submitted, I remain of that view.

⁵ In Wilson v Clydesdale Financial Services Ltd t/a Barclays Partner Finance [2021] (Unreported), the court took the view that the burden is on the debtor to prove on the balance of probabilities the facts that purportedly create the unfairness. It is then that the lender's burden of proof that requires it to prove the relationship was not unfair kicks in. While not amounting to legal precedent, the similarity of the subject matter of that case suggests to me that it is reasonable to take the same approach when considering the facts in this case.

Section 140A: Conclusion

Given all of the factors I've looked at in this part of my decision, and having taken all of them into account, I remain unpersuaded that the credit relationship between Mr N and the Lender under the Credit Agreement and related Purchase Agreement was unfair to him, such that it warrants the Lender offering any redress.

Conclusion

After careful reconsideration of the facts and circumstances of this complaint, I adopt my provisional conclusions as part of my final decision. For the reasons I've given above and in my earlier correspondence I've mentioned, I don't think the Lender acted unfairly or unreasonably when it dealt with Mr N's section 75 claims. And I'm not persuaded that the Lender was party to a credit relationship with Mr N that was unfair to him for the purposes of section 140A of the CCA. Having taken everything into account, I see no other reason why it would be fair or reasonable for me to direct the Lender to compensate Mr N.

My final decision

For the reasons set out above, my final decision is that I don't uphold this complaint.

Under the rules of the Financial Ombudsman Service, I'm required to ask Mr N to accept or reject my decision before 14 January 2026.
